NanoCover A/S – the Exchange has taken the company’s continued admittance to trading up

Today the Exchange has taken up the question of the company’s continued admittance to trading with the company.

The Exchange has taken up the question since it could be discussed if the company meets the admission requirements on First North, due to the fact that the company during a long time has been without activities, the value of the shares is very low, and also the financial situation of the company has been subject to uncertainty through a very long period.

The company has been given the possibility to give its comments to the Exchange’s assessment before December 23, 2009 at 10.00 a.m. On the basis of the company’s comments the Exchange will decide on a possible delisting. The delisting might take place before year end. The Exchange’s decision will be published.

NanoCover will still be placed on the Observation List, until a possible delisting has taken place.
