

Teleca and TAT partners on integration and customization, to offer faster and more cost-effective visual experience solutions in mobile devices

Malmö, Sweden – February 13, 2009 – Teleca, a world-leading supplier of software services to the mobile industry (Nordic Exchange, Small cap: TELC B) and TAT, a Swedish user interface software technology company offering attractive UI differentiation and user experiences on mobile devices, today announced a cooperation whereby Teleca will become a partner of TAT for integration and customization services worldwide.

Teleca will integrate and customize TAT Cascades products for device manufacturers, using its offshore capabilities in Russia. This speeds up integration work and decreases costs, enabling the mobile OEM/ODM a faster and more cost-efficient global solution. TAT Cascades is a UI framework for the production of advanced user interfaces which makes it possible to quickly and easily create and customize unique user interfaces, giving consumers a richer and more dynamic experience.

“We are pleased to become the first accredited integration and customization partner for TAT’s world-leading products. We are perfectly placed to help them throughout the world”, says Edwin Moses, Senior VP at Teleca. “Using our expertise from similar customization work where we have access to source code, we can contribute to TAT’s market success. We are already engaged in the first common project integrating TAT’s Cascades into handsets from one of the top 5 OEM”.

“Our two companies have complementary skills and business models”, says Joakim Nydemark, VP Sales, at TAT. “TAT develops and licenses solutions for creation of great user interfaces and Teleca are specialists at integrating and using products like ours for customers, increasing efficiency and decreasing the OEMs’ development spend at the same time”.
