Consilium receives new coastal radar systems order

Consilium has received an order to deliver radar systems for the surveillance of waters outside Cape Verde as well as a supplementary order for a coastal radar system previously delivered in Mexico. The combined order value is more than 4 MSEK.

The new order includes radar systems for four radar sites (VTS) which will be constructed at strategic locations in the Cape Verde archipelago. The VTS systems, the first in a comprehensive series, will apart from the traditional surveillance of waterways and harbor entrances also be able to monitor oil spills and sea pollution. Delivery of this first order will be completed during 2009.

“Consilium cooperates with several world leading VTS system integrators and these orders confirm our strong offering. We are seeing an increased demand for coastal and harbour radar surveillance leading to both new deals and extensions of existing systems”, said Ove Hansson, Consilium’s President and CEO.

VTS stands for Vessel Traffic Service (System) – radar systems configured for surveillance of waterways, harbour traffic and sensitive coastal areas.
