Pursuant to the Law on Investment Management Companies of the Republic of Latvia (hereinafter the Law) the Fund is an open-end investment fund, its objective is the investment of publicly obtained collective capital in debt securities and other liquid financial instruments, by observing the principles of risk reduction and the investment restrictions stipulated by law, and where the management company is obliged, in case requested by the Fund's investors, to repurchase the investment certificates within one month at the latest.

Investment policy

Fund's investment objective

The investment objective of ABLV High Yield CIS Bond Fund (hereinafter the Fund) is to achieve capital growth with high investment risk. In order to achieve this objective, funds are mainly invested in debt securities, where the execution of their liabilities is secured by corporations and financial institutions of the CIS countries, as well as commercial companies of other countries, with a speculative credit rating or without a credit rating.

The Fund's investment portfolio is diversified among investments in debt securities of various issuers, thus ensuring higher investment safety and protection against fluctuations of the portfolio's assets value and default risk.

The Fund makes investments in the base currency (USD), except cases when the regulated markets regulations envisage the conclusion of transactions with derivatives in another currency.

The Fund's investment policy is determined by the Investment Committee established by the Company in accordance with the Fund Regulations. The Investment Committee determines the strategic structure of the portfolio, the average redemption period and distribution across countries. The Fund manager takes tactical investment decisions in accordance with the Fund Regulations and the decisions of the Company's Management Board.

The Fund's management is passive, thus the assets of the Fund are mostly invested in medium-term and long-term debt securities, which are held to maturity. It is also possible to make investments in long-term debt securities, which are normally sold prior to their maturity term.

The Fund's performance results are assessed in accordance with the achieved increase of the investment value and are not compared to the dynamics of a previously chosen securities market index.

The Investment Fund's policy provides for the following structure of its investment portfolio:

- up to 100% of the Fund's assets may be invested in debt securities issued or guaranteed by commercial companies and credit institutions;

In order to ensure against the fluctuation risk of the market value of the Fund's assets that may occur due to changes in the price of the respective asset or exchange rate, the Fund manager has the right to invest in derivative financial instruments on the Fund's account. As transactions with derivative financial instruments originate additional risks, see Chapter "RISKS" of this Short Fund Prospectus.

The Fund's investments in derivative financial instruments may be invested solely for the purpose of the restriction of risk, ie. by restricting market risks of other financial assets.

The Fund's manager is authorised to hold the Fund's money in liquid assets, including cash, to the amount required for the Fund's activities.

Selecting investment objects

Investment objects are selected in accordance with the principles of the Fund's investment policy and investment limitations stated in the Fund Prospectus and in keeping with procedures pursuant to the Fund Management Regulations, by observing the principles of diversification and risk reduction.

The Fund manager is appointed by the Company's Management Board to fulfil the following functions: to dispose of the Fund's estate, to take decisions and to give instructions in accordance with conditions of the Fund Prospectus, decisions of the Company's Management Board, and the Fund's investment policy, in keeping with procedures pursuant to the applicable legal enactments of the Republic of Latvia and the Fund Management Regulations.

In selecting investment objects, the manager constantly analyses the existing political and economic situation, performs a comparative and technical analysis, as well as analyses the financial status of issuers.

The Fund manager, by assessing circumstances and trends on the financial instruments market, makes a decision about the use of derivative financial instruments for the restriction of risk of a particular asset or for the restriction of risk of the whole Fund's portfolio.

Risks

In accordance with conditions of the Fund Prospectus and the Regulations, funds are mainly invested in debt securities, where the execution of their liabilities is secured by corporations and financial institutions of the CIS countries, as well as commercial companies of other countries, with a speculative credit rating or without a credit rating, thus the Fund's investments are subjected to different risks.

Investment risks

Activities of the Investment Fund are related to risks arising from various circumstances. Every type of risk may have a negative impact on the Fund's performance and every share of the Fund accordingly. The following types of risks are distinguished:

Price risk means the risk of change of the securities price that has a negative impact on the value of funds and investment portfolios.

Interest rate risk means possible unfavourable influence of changing interest rates on the value of the Fund's assets with further impact on the Fund's performance. The value of debt securities fluctuates depending on changes in interest rates, to wit the market price of securities falls with growing interest rates, and vice versa.

Market liquidity risk means impossibility to realise any assets or substantial loss of the assets value at any moment.

Currency risk – as the Fund's investments are only made in the base value (USD), there is no currency risk. In transactions with derivative financial instruments there might be a need to exchange the Fund's base currency into another currency in order to execute the respective regulations of regulated markets in respect of the security deposit. This currency exchange may cause additional risk, however, it cannot be regarded as essential.

Issuer's default risk means possible decrease of value and/or loss of the financial instrument due to failure of the relevant issuer to fulfil its liabilities, its poor performance, etc. In planning the Fund's investment policy, the Company takes into account safety of investments in every specific country and in specific securities and bank fixed deposits, i.e. credit ratings of the relevant country, bank or enterprise are analysed. Encountering such risk may cause partial or full default with regard to a specific financial instrument and have a negative impact on the Fund's value and every share of the Fund accordingly.

Concentration risk arises when claims of considerable amounts are brought in against persons and/or organisations that have common credit risk (form a group of related persons) or carry on activities in one line or similar lines, or are in one and the same area or country. In such cases failure to fulfil their liabilities against the Company may be caused by unfavourable events that are peculiar to the specific group of related persons, a specific industry, area or country.

Legal risk or legislative risk means risk of possible changes in legal enactments (incl. tax policy) of this country or foreign countries, which may cause additional expenses to the Fund.

Information risk means risk related to complete unavailability or shortage of information about persons involved in funds management, investment objects or their issuers.

Liquidity risk means risk that the fund and investment portfolios will not have sufficient free funds available for fulfilment of their current liabilities.

Derivative financial instruments risk – investments in derivative financial instruments have high degree risk: the risk of unlimited losses (due to changes in prices losses may exceed the invested amount); the risk of forced closing of the position etc. The risk of losses may increase in case loans are used to cover liabilities for transactions with derivative financial instruments or in case liabilities or claims from such transactions are expressed in foreign currency.

Major risks of foreign investments

The Fund's specialisation in investing funds in the CIS countries causes higher risks. Major risks arising in the Fund's investments abroad are:

- political risk – risk arising in cases where any events that impact on its economic or political stability occur in any country or area where the Fund's assets (or their part) are placed, which may result in losses for the Fund or it may be lost;
- economic risk is related to changes in the economic situation in the investment areas, for example, economic recession, excessive inflation, bank crisis etc.;
- accounting and double taxation risk is related to application of different accounting principles in the systems of securities accounting and registration of different countries, which may cause additional difficulties for investments, as well as higher tax rates may be set for non-resident investments abroad, hence the Fund's assets may be more encumbered than in investments in the local market.

Taking into account the Fund's investment policy and structure, major risks related to the Programme's investments are concentration, interest rate, information and political risks. Other risks are limited.

Typical Investor's profile

The Fund is tailored for investors, who:

- invest in debt securities market with high investment risk with an aim to achieve capital growth and who wish to receive considerably higher return on investment than income secured by investments in debt securities with low or moderate risk;
- focus on medium-term investments, that is, wish to invest for a term not less than 2 years;
- are insurance companies and pension funds that invest in debt securities to form a diversified investment portfolio.
