Management report

The dismal sentiment surrounding the Russian market is evident in many different ways. The low valuation of the index is significant versus its own historical levels, versus credit spreads, versus other emerging markets. It is also visible through a series of cancelled IPO's and capital raisings and for example on how outfits like our own company trade at historically high discounts to net asset value. Russian stories, be it corporates or funds, have not attracted any large crowds.

This sentiment, and consequently also the market, is to an extent driven by global macro (risk perception, liquidity, risk in the financial system etc) but arguably more by a set of Russia specific factors:

1. Perception of corporate governance in Russia

When meeting investors that can invest globally their unwillingness to talk about Russian equities seems first and foremost based on their perception that corporate governance abuse is so bad that it makes Russian companies un-investable. Over the past years a series of international companies have been portrayed as victims of the Russian environment (BP, Shell, Telenor, Ikea) which collectively has created the perception described above. While acknowledging that the Russian corporate environment is far from perfect it is nevertheless not much worse than most other emerging markets, especially the BRICs (short for Brazil, Russia, India and China). Also more thorough scrutiny (as usual very seldom provided by media) of the corporate situations from which the reputation of bad corporate governance is earned, reveals a more complex picture where the international companies are themselves, at least partly, to blame. All in all we believe that an underdeveloped legal system (and the subsequent risk of corporate governance abuse) is reason for a higher risk premium in emerging markets overall when compared to more developed markets (today compensated for by a superior growth outlook), but not one that justifies an undervaluation of Russia within the emerging market context.

2. Sustainability of Russian macro development

The Russian economy has rebounded strongly from the sharp contraction of early 2009 but has yet to return to the pre-crisis levels of 7-8%. There are concerns that sluggish export markets, ineffective institutions slowing the effect of Government spending and a banking system still worried about its funding and quality of their balance sheets will make the higher growth post crisis merely an inventory led catching up effect and that future years will produce low growth. From what we learn from our portfolio companies, but which can also increasingly be seen from data, is that the Russian consumer will be an important driver of growth over the coming years funded by rouble liquidity through the banking system. We also see that rouble liquidity getting the construction and infrastructure spending going again. As Russia's export market is strongly tilted towards commodities we also see lackluster economic growth in the Western world as not a big concern for Russian macro, as demand for commodities is driven by the high growth in places like China and India.

3. Local election cycle

Russia is set for Duma (Parliamentary) elections in December 2011 and Presidential elections in March 2012. Political uncertainty ahead of these elections is sometimes given as the reason for staying away from Russian markets. Russia has over the past Parliamentary elections developed towards a two-party parliament with United Russia and Justice Party providing the typical right of centre and left of centre platforms (both with a pro-Kremlin base) essentially diminishing the importance of the once important Communist Party as well as smaller liberal factions. Duma elections will very unlikely give rise to any political uncertainty. With regards to the Presidential elections it still remains to be seen which of (or possible but unlikely both) Medvedev or Putin will run. The important factor though is that one of them will be Russia's next President and even though Medvedev is perceived to be the market friendlier of the two, actual politics will not change much with Putin as the President. All in all we believe political uncertainty is very much a perception and one that will diminish as we get closer to the actual dates.

More importantly the ushering out of Moscow Mayor Luzhkov is a positive political development as it effectively ends one of the last remnants of the Soviet Era, a politician who remained powerful partly due to an effective handling of the country's capital but also because of the enormous wealth this created.

Us being long term bulls on Russia we do not worry about the sentiment swings that have come and gone over the past two decades. At the moment we see contrarian bets being opened on the Russian market and believe they will be followed by a wider global as well as domestic investor audience. Although it is difficult to time the turning points we believe the combination of macro (global liquidity, oil price) and the micro described above are getting us there in the not too distant future. The current IPOs turning successful and a positive decision on continued privatization could well be the trigger that starts the next Russian rally.

Vostok portfolio

We feel the companies in our portfolio are in good shape and that the amount of upside and the roadmap to that upside is clear. With one or two exceptions all our portfolio companies are fully funded to capture these upsides.

Most recently the interest for RusForest's rights issue was indeed large which is especially encouraging in the light of the sentiment described above. RusForest now has the equity needed to capture the full potential in its historical assets through add-on investments and the removal of bottlenecks and to finance its entry into Northwest Russia through the Archangelsk based LDK-3.

Steppe Cement has carried out a rights issue which was fully taken up (we took our part) to restructure its balance sheet. The cement market typically rebounds late in the cycle and on top of that the Kazakh economy has been sluggish in its rebound mainly due to a severely battered up banking system during the crisis. As the banking system improves, so will the economy and eventually the cement market. The valuation of Steppe Cement does not reflect that outlook and hence we are buyers.

Finally, Clean Tech East will require more equity to start production of pellets in Russia (although not for some time). The formal decision of a Russia entry is yet to be taken but the upside it provides catering to the transformation of the European energy market ahead of 2020 is of a company changing magnitude. In the meantime the new management are well on track to delivering the turnaround of the existing assets in Southern Sweden. The underlying investment theme for pellets is that it produces electricity at half the price of oil, and (if one can stomach Russian risk – and we love it...) is available in industrial size. On top of this, as you all know by now, we think the price for oil is going up...

As you will find in this quarterly the format of reporting is slightly altered. The five largest holdings are presented in a concise format that we hope will capture the essence of the investments as well as a brief update since the previous quarterly. A more complete run down will as usual be available in the annual report.

INFORMATION ON SIGNIFICANT HOLDINGS

TNK-BP Holding

TNK-BP is a leading Russian oil company and is among the top ten privately-owned oil companies in the world in terms of crude oil production. The company was formed in 2003 as a result of the merger of BP's Russian oil and gas assets and the oil and gas assets of Alfa, Access/Renova group. TNK-BP is a vertically integrated oil company with a diversified upstream and downstream portfolio in Russia and Ukraine. The company's total proved reserves amounted to 11.67 billion barrels of oil equivalents. Vostok Nafta sees a superior production outlook due to earlier investments into promising fields. The company is highly cash generative, well managed and cost efficient thanks to a competent management team, with staff from TNK's Russian business and BP's global operations.

- TNK-BP's Board of Directors has recommended 9 month dividends of USD 0.27/share. The dividend yield amounts to 12.3% on common shares and 13.6% on preferred shares.

Black Earth Farming

Black Earth Farming (BEF) is a leading farming company, publicly listed in Stockholm and operating in Russia. It acquires, develops and farms agricultural land assets primarily in the fertile Black Earth region in southwest Russia. BEF was among the first foreign financed companies to make substantial investments in Russian agricultural land assets to exploit the large untapped potential. Because of its early establishment, BEF has gained a strong market position in several Russian regions, controlling some 330,000 hectares of what perhaps is the world's most fertile soil. The registration of controlled land into full ownership continues successfully with the majority of land now under fully registered free holds. At the same time operating improvements are ongoing with substantial long term potential for increased production and profitability.

- Black Earth Farming Ltd. has successfully completed its winter crop campaign resulting in over 100,000 hectares seeded with winter wheat.
- Sales volume for the first 6 months of 2010 amounted to 197,892 tons compared to 311,455 tons for the first 6 months of 2009 affected by lower crop inventory carry-over in 2010.
- Crop Yields for wheat and barley was down 40-50% y-o-y for 2010 harvest due to this summer's weather conditions in Russia. Grain prices have however increased dramatically since early July 2010. Remains to be seen if price increases will compensate for BEF's volume shortfall.

Tinkoff Credit Systems

Tinkoff Credit Systems (TCS) is Russia's first and only pure credit card lending institution. Based in Moscow, TCS Bank issues credit cards to customers in all of Russia's regions. TCS's senior management consists of a team of experienced professionals formerly employed by Visa, McKinsey and several top Russian banks. The business model is branch-less with customer recruitment and distribution handled via direct mail complemented by online services and a call centre. The advanced underwriting process and customer acquisition by invitation only limits the risk of fraud and exposure to less desirable customers, thus reducing the credit risk. Russian consumer lending is expected to grow at 47% through 2010 driven by a strong macro-economic performance and outlook. The recently carried out rouble bond and the early redemption of the company's Eurobond have given increased visibility on funding, which in our view was a clear pre-requisite for a higher equity valuation.

Vostok Nafta has re-valued its equity position in TCS, from USD 18.2 mln up to USD 41.7 mln, based on conservative assumptions that comprise Vostok Nafta's best assessment of the economic conditions that are expected to prevail. This valuation is Vostok Nafta's subjective valuation and may not reflect the real value of the business.

Kuzbassrazrezugol

Kuzbassrazrezugol (KZRU) is Russia's second largest thermal coal producer representing over 20 percent of Russia's total exports of thermal coal. KZRU extracts its coal from 12 open mine pits, all located in the large coal district of Kuzbass in south-western Siberia, making it one of the lowest cost producers of high quality thermal coal. Reserves are estimated at 2.2 billion tons of coal implying a reserve life of at least 50 years. The majority of production consists of thermal coal which is mainly used in coal-fired power plants. The key driver of the Russian thermal coal market is the power sector liberalization and the transition from gas to coal as a fuel source. Domestic thermal coal prices are at a large discount to international prices due to the regulations of natural gas and electricity prices in Russia. The gradual liberalization of these markets will close that gap.

- The company's new coking coal washing plant was operating at an 87% run-rate in the second quarter of 2010. The plant is expected to reach full capacity by the end of 2010.
- EBITDA for the second quarter 2010 amounted to USD 125 mln.
- According to the company's 9 months production update, the production increased by 5.4% y-o-y to 35.98 million tonnes. Of the total, coking coal output totalled 3.3 million tonnes of coal, up 62.2% y-o-y.

RusForest

RusForest is active within the forestry sector in Eastern Siberia, Russia. The company was established in 2006 through the acquisitions of Tuba-Les and PIK-89 in the Irkutsk region. Since then, RusForest has reached a considerable scale, both in terms of forest resources and sawmilling capacity, through strategic acquisitions and brownfield development projects. The company currently controls over 850 thousand hectares of forest land with an annual allowable cut (AAC) of 1.4 million cubic metres. By increasing its sawmilling capacity as well as adding other value-adding activities RusForest will continue to develop its vast resource and unlock its potential by delivering a good return to its shareholders.

- During the fourth quarter, RusForest has completed a rights issue that was oversubscribed by 46%. The new share issue has provided the company with approximately SEK 437 mln before issue costs. Vostok Nafta subscribed its share of the rights issue, contributing with approximately SEK 187,8 mln.
- The Board of Directors of RusForest has decided to acquire 86% of OAO "LDK-3" and 100% of OOO "Infa", a sawmilling operation, a planning mill, forestry leases and an industrial port located in the city of Arkhangelsk, in North West Russia.
- For the purpose of creating a more well-balanced shareholder structure, Vostok Nafta has sold 1,500,000 shares of RusForest AB to Alecta, a large Swedish pension fund, representing 6.9% of the total number of shares outstanding. Vostok Nafta remains the largest shareholder of RusForest after this transaction, controlling 43% of the shares.
