

HiQ helps Symsoft with development and quality assurance for its payment solutions for mobile operators

HiQ has been assigned by Symsoft AB to help further develop its pre-pay solutions based on the Nobill platform. Solutions based on Nobill are sold to mobile operators world-wide, and HiQ's assignment involves both development and quality assurance when the solutions are delivered to Symsoft's customers.

"Symsoft is a leading supplier of pre-pay solutions for mobile operators, and over 30 operators around the globe use products based on our Nobill platform. More than 100 million users are handled daily through the use of Nobill systems world wide. The platform handles all types of mobile services such as data traffic, voice, SMS and MMS in the second and third generation mobile networks," says Björn Berndtsson, CEO of Symsoft.

HiQ's assignment is to ensure quality of the solutions when delivered to Symsoft's customers, and further development of Nobill products in line with tomorrow's demands on communications solutions.

"The Nobill platform has a modular architecture which makes it possible to bring functionality in line with customer's specific needs and to integrate the solution with highly complex systems. With the help from HiQ, we can rapidly increase our capacity to meet up to customer demand and ensure quality in our deliveries," continues Björn Berndtsson.

"HiQ has been working with players in the telecoms industry for almost 15 years and we have very broad and deep expertise in this field. The Symsoft assignment is an excellent example of how our specialist communication and system development expertise can help a client like Symsoft strengthen its offering in the market," says Bo Ringdahl, Managing Director of HiQ Stockholm.
