Cybercom gets new assignment in the Middle East

Cybercom won an order with a new customer in the Middle East for a network audit of the customer's GSM network in Syria.

"We are very happy about the confidence the operator has in us," says Conny Karlsson, head of Cybercom's operation in the Middle East. "The order for this project is strategically important to Cybercom and opens up for more assignments after we screen the network and identify possible performance and efficiency improvements. It also strengthens our position and will contribute to our continued growth and recruitment in the region."

The agreement covers five consultants through the end of the year with possibilities for extension.

"Cybercom sees potential for helping more operators in the region streamline their networks in the next few years," says Karlsson. "In this project, Cybercom's specialists will show operators the value they can get from a partnership with us in a short period of time."
