The concept

A number of the small and medium-sized companies on NASDAQ OMX make a special effort to increase liquidity in their shares. They communicate more frequently and more directly with the financial market, the investors, the employees and other stakeholders about their activities and financial position than required by the rules of NASDAQ OMX.

The plus-segments are characterised by:

- High liquidity ensures frequent and narrow quotes in the share. Investors may therefore more frequently trade a share with a small difference between the bid and ask prices. This reduces the investor's total cost when trading shares.
- Frequent information ensures that the investors are kept abreast of the company's affairs. This reduces uncertainty and thereby the investors' risk.
- Good investor relations ensure that shareholders are taken seriously and are serviced appropriately.

OMX Nordic Exchange Copenhagen established the MidCap+ and SmallCap+ segments in April 2003, and the companies must qualify for the segments by meeting a number of criteria.

The criteria

Companies in the MidCap+ and SmallCap+ segments are elected twice a year in June and December.

MidCap+ and SmallCap+ companies must meet criteria that go beyond what is generally required of companies listed on NASDAQ OMX.
