Enea (NASDAQ OMX Nordic: ENEA)

Enea signs 1.3 MUSD service deal with US aerospace / defense company

Enea and a leading US aerospace/defense company have signed a new service agreement valued at 1.3 MUSD over a period of 5 months.

The customer, who is a global technology leader in the avionics industry has selected Enea as the supplier based on strong, proven capabilities in the aerospace / avionics industry.

Enea's North America Professional Services team, located in Arizona, has developed strong relationships, which have positioned them to deliver this critical project. They have provided this customer with a full services package including specialized engineering expertise, flexible models and the strength of onsite program management. In this case, Enea's North America team has taken on full responsibility for the program management and delivery of this critical avionics display program including requirements, software design/development, and validation components.

"The Avionics industry is a key component of our Global Services business, and we begin to see the improving trends being confirmed in projects funded by the US national budget", says Anders Lidbeck, President and CEO for Enea. "The customer's renewed confidence in Enea is a testament to our Avionics expertise in software design, development, integration, test and maintenance."
