Maryjo Charbonnier Appointed as Chief Human Resources Officer for Wolters Kluwer

December 1, 2014 - Wolters Kluwer announces that Maryjo Charbonnier will join the company per January 2015 as its new Chief Human Resources Officer. Ms. Charbonnier succeeds Kathy Baker, who will retire after 10 years in the role. Maryjo is currently Chief Human Resources Officer at Broadridge, and prior to that held several HR leadership roles at PepsiCo.

Nancy McKinstry in her welcome to the new HR leader, “Maryjo has extensive experience and leadership in HR strategy, talent acquisition and development, and employee engagement programs. She will strongly contribute to our ambition to be the employer of choice for professionals working for a global digital company.”

“I look forward to joining Wolters Kluwer, a highly interesting company, serving customers that work in areas of improving quality of healthcare, financial security and building strong systems of law. To be able to contribute to that will be for me, as for all employees at Wolters Kluwer, very rewarding”, commented Maryjo Charbonnier.

Ms. Charbonnier will join Wolters Kluwer’s headquarters and will report to the CEO of Wolters Kluwer, Nancy McKinstry.
