Press release: Nexam Chemical appoints Lars Öhrn to CMO.

Nexam Chemical has recruited Lars Öhrn to the newly created position as CMO. A clear strengthening of the organization and an important step in the commercialization phase the company is in.

Lars Öhrn, with a background in chemistry, has throughout most of his career worked with marketing and sales in the plastic industry. His most recent position was with Borouge, an Abu Dhabi based company owned by Abu Dhabi National Oil Company and Borealis. As Market Application Manager, he was responsible for marketing and introducing new products to the markets in e.g. the Middle East and large parts of Asia. With Lars, the organization strengthens the skills and experiences needed to become a professional player in marketing and sales. Lars will assume his position in May 2015.

"I am very happy, satisfied and proud that Lars Öhrn has chosen to join us. Lars brings to Nexam Chemical a solid marketing and sales experience from the plastic industry. He has held a number of senior roles within both polymer manufacturing and plastic processing companies. Lars' knowledge and insight of how to generate value for the customer and the in-depth knowledge of applications, all necessities to be a credible partner, contributes greatly to drive our efforts in the right direction" says Anders Spetz, CEO.

"Nexam Chemical has an interesting product portfolio that improve material properties, increases efficiency and contributes to increased profitability within the plastic industry. I look forward to being a part of the Nexam Chemical team and build marketing and sales", says Lars Öhrn.
