

Brighter has filed suit against HotSwap.

After the aborted launch of our first product Brighter One™ Brighter has initiated legal proceedings against its former development partner HotSwap for damages, requesting reimbursement for paid consultancy fees, lost profits and other damages in the amount of approximately SEK 34.8 million.

The legal process has begun by which Brighter has filed that HotSwap has grossly mismanaged its assignment to develop our first product. This has resulted in considerable financial damages for Brighter and its shareholders.

“We canceled the launch because what HotSwap delivered was substandard”, says Truls Sjöstedt, Brighter's CEO and founder.

“HotSwap just could not manage to maintain the high quality level we clearly specified. Brighter wants to be reimbursed for the development costs, plus compensation for, among others, lost profits that the aborted launch entailed.”

The legal process began after HotSwap failed to meet Brighter's out of court proceedings.

“In my opinion there is no doubt about who did right and who is at fault in this case, as emphasized by HotSwaps actions. Among other, HotSwap claimed "better right" to a patent Brighter applied for, although HotSwap has assigned all the rights to intellectual property in the agreement between the parties”, says Truls Sjöstedt.

The amount Brighter claims that HotSwap be obliged to pay amounts to about SEK 34.8 million plus interest in accordance with § 6 of the Swedish Interest Act. In addition Brighter claims reimbursement of legal expenses.
