ÅF, through its Engineering Division, has acquired the technical consulting company Cordinor with a staff of 15 and around 10 sub-consultants in Luleå and Kiruna.

Cordinor, which was formed in 1995, is a well-established consulting company offering qualified engineering services for the mining industry. Its principal client is the international minerals group LKAB.

This latest acquisition confirms ÅF's status as one of the foremost technical consulting companies in the north of Sweden, with a total of almost 100 employees now in place to serve the region.
