

Advenica has won a strategic order from an EU country

The Swedish cybersecurity company Advenica has received an order of the cross-domain solution, SecuriCDS DD1000A. The product is a high assurance uni-directional solution which ensures that data traffic only can pass in one direction. The order is strategically important for Advenica since the customer is new and have chosen one of the company's most recently developed solutions.

A central Government in an EU country have after due diligence and validation decided to place an order for the product SecuriCDS DD1000A from Advenica.

The order proves Advenica's competitiveness when it comes to offering and delivering information security solutions for the most demanding customers.

"We are proud to have received this order from a knowledgeable and competent customer. We believe that our effort into ensuring the quality and documenting the assurance level of this product have helped us to win this order. Our position at the European IT security market strengthens further thanks to this order."

Jonas Dellenvall, CTO, Advenica AB

The Data Diode, DD1000A, is a high assurance uni-directional solution for making sure that data traffic can only pass in one direction and thereby prevents sensitive information to pass in the opposite direction.

The solution meets the demands that many organisations have to ensure data confidentiality and integrity for their information exchanges on a variety of security levels.
