

Eolus places order for 74 wind turbines, 279 MW with Vestas

Hässleholm, Sweden, December 29, 2017

Eolus has signed an agreement with Vestas regarding delivery of 74 wind turbines of the model V136 with a capacity of 279 MW for four wind farms in Sweden. The wind turbines will be constructed in the wind farms Kråktorpet, Nylandsbergen, Sötterfällan and Anneberg.

61 wind turbines have a capacity of 3.8 MW each. Thereof, 43 will be constructed in wind farm Kråktorpet and 18 will be constructed in wind farm Nylandsbergen. These two wind farms are covered by the sales agreement signed with Aquila Capital and which was announced by Eolus in a press release on December 23. Commissioning is expected during the second half of 2019. The projects are located close to wind farm Jenåsen that is currently under construction by Eolus in Sundsvall municipality.

13 wind turbines have a capacity of 3.6 MW each. Thereof, 10 will be constructed in wind farm Sötterfällan and 3 will be constructed in wind farm Anneberg. These wind farms are covered by the sales agreement signed with KGAL which was announced by Eolus in a press release on December 22. Commissioning of Sötterfällan is expected during the summer of 2019 and commissioning of Anneberg is expected during December 2018.

All four wind farms have full service agreements for 15-20 years from commissioning.

-Eolus' objective is to establish high-quality wind farms with the lowest possible cost of energy over the lifetime. In a market with an extremely fast technical development, long term partnerships with world class turbine suppliers like Vestas is an absolute key to success. This deal is based on a long trustful cooperation between our companies and Vestas has shown great flexibility to meet the projects specific requirements, says Eolus CEO Per Witalisson.

-As the largest order to date between Eolus and Vestas, we are delighted to reaffirm our strong and long-standing relationship. These projects also underline Vestas' product portfolio's flexibility and our ability to tailor our solutions to customer needs says Christer Baden Hansen, Vestas Head of Sales Nordics.
